[SUIT NO: S2-23-32-1996]

9 AUGUST 1997

CIVIL PROCEDURE: Stay of proceedings - Inherent power of court - Alternative forum - Justice

UNINCORPORATED ASSOCIATIONS: Societies - Member's right to sue - Whether member should refer to proper body set up by association - Whether to exhaust all domestic remedies before resorting to court

UNINCORPORATED ASSOCIATIONS: Judicial review - Whether relief by court allowed - Whether domestic remedies bind court - Whether jurisdiction of court ousted

The plaintiff and the defendants are members of a fraternity known as the 'Freemasons', which has its own rules and regulations pertaining to the settlement of complaints and disputes among members. The plaintiff alleged that the defendants had conspired to injure him, in his integrity and profession, and thus brought an action against them for defamation. The plaintiff further applied for an injunction to restrain the defendants from continuing the alleged campaign of falsehood and misrepresentation against the plaintiff, and from publishing the allegedly defamatory words. The defendants denied the plaintiff's allegation, and applied for a stay of all proceedings, until both the plaintiff and defendants had exhausted all domestic remedies available to them through the by-laws of the District Grand Lodge ('the Lodge') and the Constitution of the United Lodge of England. The plaintiff contended that neither the Lodge nor the fraternity could grant damages or an injunction, and therefore he should be allowed to proceed to trial. The issues before the court were: (i) whether a stay of proceedings could be granted; (ii) whether all domestic remedies should be exhausted before resorting to the court; and (iii) whether relief could be granted even though domestic remedies afforded by the rules had not been exhausted.

a Held:

- [1] An association or society is a gathering of a number of persons who agree to be bound by their own charter or code of conduct between themselves. By agreeing to accept its own tribunal, a member ought to allow for its own tribunal to hear his grievances and to exhaust all domestic remedies, before resorting to the courts.
- [2] The by-laws of the Lodge and the Constitution of the United Lodge of England provide that all disputes concerning the activities of a member will be settled, without resorting to the filing of legal proceedings in court, unless it is absolutely necessary, and is so apparent to the Lodge.
- [2a] The proper forum for the plaintiff, in the present case, to air his grievances, would be before the appropriate body set up by the by-laws of the Lodge and the constitution of the Lodge, and if the appropriate body had disregarded or over-stepped its code of conduct or departed from the constitutional provisions, then the plaintiff would be free to challenge that decision in the courts.
- [3] Pursuant to Practice Direction 4(a)(1), the High Court has inherent powers to postpone or to adjourn the hearing of any matter, in order to do justice between the parties. An applicant, when applying for a stay of proceedings, must satisfy the court that there is an alternative forum to whose jurisdiction both he and the plaintiff have ready access; that justice can be done with very little inconvenience and expense to both parties; and that the grant of a stay will not deprive the plaintiff of any juridical advantage.
- [4] It was held in Sykt Bekerjasama-Sama Serbaguna Sungei Gelugor Dengan Tanggungan Bhd v. Majlis Perbandaran Pulau Pinang, that the availability of an alternative domestic remedy will not shut out an application for judicial review, unless the alternative domestic remedy is intended for and in fact constitutes a wholly adequate machinery for the just disposal of the complaint in question. In the present case, the Antient Charges and Obligations specially provided for the right of the plaintiff to resort to the court if all else had failed and so there was no question of an ouster of the ordinary jurisdiction of the court. However, although the court was not bound by those rules the plaintiff had nevertheless to show cause why the court should grant relief before he had exhausted all the domestic remedies available.

RK Nathan JC:

This was an application by the 1st defendant (encl. 18) to stay all proceedings until both the plaintiff and the 1st defendant exhaust all remedies available to them pursuant to the by-laws of the "District Grand Lodge of the Eastern Archipelago" and the "Constitution of the United Lodge of England" in relation to the issues raised by the plaintiff in the statement of claim and for costs in the cause.

Background Facts

The plaintiff, an advocate and solicitor, and the defendants are members of the Fraternity more commonly known as "Freemasons" under the jurisdiction of the organisation known as "the United Grand Lodge of England" (the Grand Lodge). The membership in areas outside the United Kingdom is governed by its subsidiary organisations more commonly known as "District Grand Lodges" which then are duly registered societies under the laws of the countries in which their members reside.

In Malaysia and Singapore the Freemasons come under the jurisdiction of the "District Grand Lodge of the Eastern Archipelago" of which the 1st defendant, a Singaporean with permanent resident status, is the head, and bears the title

- a* “District Grand Master”. The 2nd defendant, a resident of Hong Kong, like the 1st defendant is the District Grand Master of the District Grand Lodge of Hong Kong and the Far East. Within the District Grand Lodge there are several Private Lodges which come under its jurisdiction. The plaintiff and the 1st defendant are members of these Private Lodges.
- b* All Freemasons who are members of the respective District Grand Lodges owe allegiance to the Grand Lodge and are governed by rules and regulations more particularly contained in the “Book of Constitution” of the said Grand Lodge. Additionally they are also governed by “Antient Charges” which are analogous to customs and conventions, of the Fraternity as well as the several obligations
- c* which they are obliged to take, without which they cannot be admitted as members. The Antient Charges are contained in the Book of Constitutions as well as in the “Book of Rituals”. All members pay subscriptions as prescribed for under the relevant by-laws of the Fraternity. All these provisions constitute the contractual provisions which bind the members inter se.
- d* Like any other society, the infraction of any provisions entitles the members to impose disciplinary measures on the defaulting members, such as to censure, to suspend and to expel.

Plaintiff’s Case Against The Defendants

- e* It is the plaintiff’s case against the defendants that they conspired to injure and did in fact implement their conspiracy to injure the plaintiff in his integrity and profession or occupation by a systematic campaign of falsehood, misrepresentation, lies and abuse of the authority of their respective offices
- f* as District Grand Master of the respective Masonic Districts of the Eastern Archipelago and the District of Hong Kong and the Far East. The plaintiff further contends that the defendants exploited the trust which the members reposed in them to their advantage, so that when the members were confronted with a series of misleading statements, the benefit of doubt would somehow be in the defendants’ favour.
- g* The plaintiff therefore claimed damages and further aggravated or exemplary damages, an injunction to restrain the defendants and each of them by themselves or by their servants or agents from publishing defamatory words and from continuing the campaign of falsehood and costs.

h Plaintiff’s Reliance On The Antient Charges And Obligations

In his statement of claim the plaintiff pleaded that of particular importance and relevance to his case are the following extracts of Antient Charges and Obligations which all members are bound to uphold:

(a) A Freemason's tongue should always be ready to be used in a brother's defence or for his advantage; never to his prejudice, or in defamation or slander, for the tongue of slander inflicts a deeper wound than does the keenest sword. Therefore we should always speak of a brother in his absence as we would if he were present; but when unfortunately good cannot with truth be spoken of him, we should adopt the excellent motto of the Craft – silence.

(b) The pen is an emblem of silent communication. It should never be used but in just and righteous cause; nor on the other hand should it be backward in aiding and defending the helpless and the oppressed, but should always be ready to be used in the fearless championship of Innocence, Truth and Virtue.

(c) Your obedience must be proved by a strict observance of our laws and regulations.

Obligations

(a) That I will maintain a Freemason's honour and will carefully preserve it as my own; that I will not injure or malign him myself; nor knowingly suffer others to do so, if in my power to prevent it, but on the contrary will boldly repel the slanderer of his good name.

(b) That I will myself observe, and as far as lies in my power will strictly enforce, those Antient Charges and Regulations to which I have already given my assent; and that I will in all things, so far as in me lies, faithfully, zealously and conscientiously perform my duty ...

1st Defendant's Case

His was a mere denial of the allegation of conspiracy and defamation.

The plaintiff, upon receipt of the defence, promptly filed an application, encl. 9, to strike out the defence as showing no defence. The 1st defendant then filed an amended defence pursuant to O. 20 r. 3 of the Rules of the High Court 1980 and stated that the current constitution governing the members of the Grand Lodge is the 1989 Book of Constitutions and that the Ancient Charges of the Fraternity as contained in the 1989 Book of Constitutions include the following charges:

(a) ... If any complaint is brought, the brother found guilty shall stand to the award and determination of the lodge, who are the proper and competent judges of all such controversies (unless you carry them by appeal to the grand lodge), and to whom they ought to be referred, unless a lord's work be hindered the meanwhile, in which case a particular

a reference may be made, but you must never go to law about what concerneth masonry, without an absolute necessity apparent to the lodge.

(b) ... And if any of them do you injury, you must apply to your own lodge or his lodge, and from thence you may appeal to the grand lodge at the quarterly communication, as has been the antient laudable conduct of our forefathers in every nation, never taking a legal course but when the case cannot be otherwise decided ...

c It was the 1st defendant's case that the Antient Charges and Obligations set out therein have now been superseded by the provisions contained in the 1989 Constitution. The 1st defendant contended that the by-laws provide that all complaints and appeals shall be forwarded through the Master of a Private Lodge (the Lodge) who is required to acknowledge receipt of the complaint or appeal and to submit the same to the District Grand Secretary and should the Master fail or refuse to do so, the complainant or appellant may submit the complaint or appeal directly to the District Grand Secretary. It was further d contended that the plaintiff had not to date submitted a complaint pursuant to the by-laws and the District Grand Secretary had not received a complaint from the plaintiff on the matter set out in his claim to this court.

e In reply the plaintiff averred in his affidavit, (encl. 13) that the amended defence which included charge (b) was incomplete and that it ought to continue to include:

f ... and patiently listen to the honest and friendly advice of Master and fellows, when they would prevent your going to law with strangers, or would excite you to put a speedy period to all law-suits, that so you may find the affair of masonry with the more alacrity and success; but with respect to brothers or fellows at law, the Master and brethren should kindly offer their mediation which ought to be thankfully SUBMITTED TO BY THE CONTENDING BRETHREN; and if that submission is impracticable, they must, however CARRY ON THEIR PROCESS, OR LAW SUIT WITHOUT WRATH AND RANCOUR (not in the common way), saying or doing nothing which may

g hinder brotherly love and good offices to be renewed and continued, that all may see the benign influence of masonry, as all true masons have done from the beginning of the world, and will do to the end of time.

h Subsequently in his reply the plaintiff included that which he had averred in encl. 13.

i The plaintiff argued that neither the Lodge nor the Fraternity could grant damages nor an injunction and that therefore he ought to be permitted to proceed to trial.

Court's Finding

It is clear from the contents of the by-laws that the members of the District Grand Lodge have agreed between themselves that as far as is possible, they will settle all disputes concerning their activities without resorting to the filing of legal proceedings in court unless it is absolutely necessary and is so apparent to the Lodge. The Constitution of the Grand Lodge provides a full and detailed procedure to enable its members to seek redress for any perceived wrongs they have suffered, including the formation of a Committee of Enquiry and the opportunity for a subsequent appeal.

I find from the facts of the case that the plaintiff's cause of action against the 1st defendant is predicated on the acts committed by the 1st defendant in his capacity as the District Grand Master. From the pleadings, it is apparent that the events and facts concern the activities of the District Grand Lodge and the alleged failure of the District Grand Master to take steps to "protect" or defend the plaintiff from perceived attacks made by members of the District Grand Lodge against him. I find that because of the nature of the plaintiff's allegations and the facts of this particular case, the proper forum for the plaintiff to air his grievances would be before the appropriate body set up pursuant to the by-laws of the District Grand Lodge and the Constitution of the Grand Lodge.

Practice Directions (West Malaysia) No 5 Of 1989

These Directions which came into force on 1 January 1996 dealt specifically with matters concerning adjournments. Practice Direction 4(a)(1) which deals with Civil Trials reads as follows:

4 Civil Trials

(a)(i) Apart from O. 35 r. 3 of the Rules of the High Court 1980, the High Court has inherent power to postpone or to adjourn the hearing of any matter in order to do justice between the parties. (see Hinckley and South Leicestershire Permanent Benefit Building Society v. Freeman [1941] Ch 32.)

Whilst Practice Directions do not have the force that the Rules have they cannot be treated as mere superfluous appendage to dot the law journals. Practice Directions are given to achieve a purpose. In this case I am firmly of the view that whilst the said Practice Direction deals with the inherent power to postpone or to adjourn the hearing to do justice between the parties, an order granting a stay would equally fall within the ambit of this Practice Direction. In fact in Hinckley etc Society v. Freeman [1941] Ch 32 the court held that it had the inherent jurisdiction to adjourn proceedings for a stated time but not generally or for an unreasonably long time (see Robertson v. Cilia [1956] 1 WLR 1502).

a When Ought A Stay Be Granted

When an application for stay is launched on the basis that there is an alternative or cheaper mode by which the same dispute can be dealt with, a court must consider such application favourably. The onus is on the applicant defendant to satisfy the court that there is an alternative forum to whose jurisdiction both he and the plaintiff have ready access and that justice could be done with very little inconvenience and expense to both parties. The defendant must also satisfy the court that a grant of a stay on such a ground would not deprive the plaintiff of any juridical advantage.

c Non Profit Associations Or Societies

An association or society is a gathering of a number of persons who agree to be bound by their own charter or code of conduct between themselves. The court, whilst it has the power to intervene in disputes brought before it, ought to exercise reticence and caution before intervening to regulate the affairs or resolve disputes between its members. In fact in RV Benchers of Lincoln's Inn [1825] 4 B & C 855; 107 ER 1277 the judges, who were also Visitors of the Inn, refused to issue a mandamus directing the Inn to admit an apparently qualified person as a student at law, and said that they did so because "they make their own rules as to the admission of members; even if they act capriciously upon the subject, this court can give no remedy in such a case; because in fact there has been no violation of a right".

In fact the very existence of an association or society is the will of its members to be bound by its code of conduct and the existence of a shared common understanding between the members. It is my finding that members by joining an association or society and agreeing to subscribe to its charter have consented to selecting their own tribunal, and that the function of the court is to see that that tribunal applies the accepted rules and guidelines in its determination. It is my judgment that by agreeing to accept its own tribunal, a member, and in this case the plaintiff, ought to allow for its own tribunal to proceed to hear his grievances and that if the said tribunal in any manner whatsoever disregards or over-steps its code of conduct or departs from the constitutional provisions, then he is free to challenge that decision in this court. The members had chosen to associate themselves together and thus should use the forum provided by the said association to discuss matters of concern, and hear disputes. There is clear provision in the Antient Charges and Obligations for recourse to a court, if issues cannot be resolved within the Freemasonry.

Within our shores is the case of Periasamy s/o Karuppan & Ors v. National Union of Plantation Workers & Ors [1975] 2 MLJ 108. In that case the applicants were members of a trade union. The applicants sued for an injunction to restrain the respondents from taking or holding or remaining in office as executive members of the union, on the ground that their election was illegal. The matter was not referred to the Registrar of Trade Unions for a decision as required by the Constitution of the Union. The respondents raised as a preliminary objection the applicants' entitlement to sue. The court held that the applicants ought to have exhausted all domestic remedies before coming to court. In Tharmalingam v. Sambanthan [1961] MLJ 63 CA in a dispute concerning the Malaysian Indian Congress the then Court of Appeal held that it was a condition precedent that the appellant should resort to the domestic remedies provided before resorting to the courts.

The plaintiff relied on Leigh v. National Union of Railwaymen and Another [1969] 3 All ER 1249 to submit that relief would be granted even though the plaintiff had not exhausted or embarked on the domestic remedies afforded by the rules since these were not binding on the court so as to oust its jurisdiction to grant such relief as it saw fit.

On a detailed study of the said case I note that Goff J said at p. 1252:

... even where there is an express provision in the rules that the plaintiff must first exhaust his domestic remedies the court is not absolutely bound by that because its jurisdiction cannot be ousted but the plaintiff will have to show cause why it should interfere with the contractual position. (emphasis added)

In any event, Leigh's case was a trade union dispute and in Lawlor and Others v. Union Of Post Office Workers [1965] 1 All ER 353, 363 Thomas J said:

Trade union rules clearly cannot oust the jurisdiction of the courts.

In Enderby Town Football Club Ltd v. The Football Association Ltd & Another [1971] 1 All ER 215 at 219 Lord Denning said:

... The rules of a body like this are often said to be a contract. So they are in legal theory. But it is a fiction – a fiction created by the lawyers so as to give the courts jurisdiction. This is no new thing. There are many precedents for it, from the time of John Doe onwards. Putting the fiction aside, the truth is that the rules are nothing more nor less than a legislative code – a set of regulations laid down by the governing body to be observed by all who are, or become, members of the association. Such regulations, although said to be a contract, are subject to the control of the courts. If they are in unreasonable restraint of trade, they are invalid: see Dickson v. Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain ([1967] 2 All ER 558). If they seek to oust the jurisdiction of the court, they are invalid:

- a* But in the instant case before me the Antient Charges and Obligations specifically provide for the right of the plaintiff to resort to the court if all else fails. There is therefore no question of an ouster of the ordinary jurisdiction of the court.
- b* Very recently Mahadev Shankar JCA said in Sykt Bekerjasama-Sama Serbaguna Sungei Gelugor Dengan Tanggungan Bhd v. Majlis Perbandaran Pulau Pinang [1996] 2 MLJ 697 that the availability of an alternative domestic remedy will not shut out an application for judicial review where the complaint made to the court is one of “error of law” or “abuse of power” going to the legality of the conduct of the inferior tribunal or other decision-making authority, unless the alternative domestic remedy was intended for and in fact constitutes a wholly adequate machinery for the just disposal of the complaint in question.
- c*

I therefore granted an order in terms of encl. 18 with costs.
